

Longwood Gardens – September 1, 2010

At the September meeting, Pauline Myre gave the GGG members an excellent presentation on Longwood Gardens covering the numerous outdoor garden areas, the architecture, the fountains and the wide variety of trees, shrubs and flowering plants as well as the conservatory in all seasons of the year.

Longwood Gardens, located near Kennett Square, Pennsylvania, is the living legacy of Pierre S. du Pont (DuPont chemical company) and is considered one of the great gardens of the World. The gardens encompasses 1,050 acres of gardens, woodlands, and meadows including over 11,000 types of plants and more fountains than any other garden in the United States.

Presentation on Longwood Gardens
by Pauline Myre

Members can have another look at the gardens at the Longwood Gardens website:

<http://www.longwoodgardens.org>

Perhaps some of our members will consider stopping at Longwood Gardens next spring on their way back from Florida next spring!

Below are several photographs taken from the Longwood Gardens website.

